

Generated Short Notes

- 13 Results of the Industrial Revolution Broad changes occurred in political, social and economic sectors in many countries due to the industrial revolution that took place everywhere in the world
- There were several reasons for the spread of the industrial revolution to other countries in the 19th century
- The industrial revolution that began in Britain spread to the countries in the European continent also within a short period of time
- The industrial revolution resulted in a wealthy class that invested money for profit and an underprivileged class that survived by selling labour
- Then the industrial revolution spread to other European countries with the help of their governments to achieve their targets
- The industrial revolution was greatly felt in many Asian countries including China, India and Sri Lanka by the 20th century, and the rapid development it created in transport and communication fields
- The industrial revolution that began in Britain spread to other countries in the 19th century, and the rapid development it created in transport and communication fields
- Japan was an Asian country which had an enormous development in the industrial sector during the latter half of the 19th century and the first few decades of the 20th century
- The rich exploited the labour of the underprivileged in their businesses and earned a huge profit
- The rich exploited the labour of the underprivileged in their businesses and a class of business people gradually developed in the first half of the 19th century and the first few decades of the 20th century, and the emergence of labour unions, boycotts, struggles for rights, etc., and the emergence of labour unions, boycotts, struggles for rights, and a lot of new job opportunities
- The self-sufficient economy failed and emerged a working class that worked for a salary
- Farmers who owned small lands had to come to cities and join these factories as they could not carry on working in their farms as they could not carry on working in their farms
- This made transactions and loan facilities easy for the entrepreneurs
- The capitalist economic system too spread rapidly around the globe, and the import-export economy came forward

- The agroecconomic system broke down and the agroecconomic system broke down and the selfsufficient economy failed and emerged a working class that was engaged in production of goods and buying and selling simultaneously were engaged in monetary and banking activities, and the selfsufficient economy failed and emerged a working class that could not carry on working in their farms as they could not carry on working in their farms as they could not carry on working in their farms, and the agroecconomic system became industrialized and a number of food types came to markets, and the agroecconomic system came forward
- The agroecconomic system became industrialized and a number of food types came forward, and the agroecconomic system became industrialized and a number of food types came forward.

Total Word Count: 478